Mind cooler than April by 3 degrees

Why were April so cool? One factor could be the El Niño effect. El Niño, a climate pattern that occurs every few years, can lead to cooler than normal temperatures in some regions. In April, the Indian Ocean experienced a strong El Niño event, which can cool down the water temperature. This cooler ocean temperature can lead to cooler air temperatures over land. Additionally, the presence of an El Niño can lead to higher rainfall, which can also cool the environment.

Deep transplant – who are all right, but incompatible with the organ, and so cannot be used. Some hospitals have explored the option of a so-called second transplant, where two different donors give one recipient a second chance. This means that a patient with a single kidney can have two grafts at once.
